Launch of the "Sale of Ships Under the Singapore Form" Publication

The first book to provide a practical annotation to the Singapore Ship Sale Form

Date : 8 April
Time : 9:00am - 1:00pm
Venue : Vanda Ballroom, Level 5, Marina Mandarin Singapore
Organiser: SMF and LexisNexis

LexisNexis® Singapore (www.lexisnexis.com.sg), a leading global provider of content and technology solutions, and the Singapore Maritime Foundation (SMF) are holding an official book launch to celebrate the launch of the publication, Sale of Ships Under The Singapore Form on 8th April 2013 at Marina Mandarin Singapore

The maritime industry in Asia has seen significant growth in the last few decades. Today, Asian shipowners control about 50% of the world's merchant fleet. As Asia's economic powerhouses, China and India, continue to witness rapid levels of economic growth and the centre of gravity of global shipping steadily shifting towards Asia, ship sales and purchases will increase exponentially. Maritime arbitration and disputes cases in the region are also expected to rise. In response to the Singapore and Asian maritime community's call for an alternative form that would better cater to their needs, SMF had launched the Singapore Ship Sale Form (SSF) in 2011. To date, more than 200 known ship sale and purchase transactions worldwide have used the SSF as their MOA of choice. To visit the official website of the Singapore Ship Sale Form, please visit www.singforms.com.

The launch of the Sale of Ships Under The Singapore Form publication will mark a key milestone for the SSF. The publication seeks to be a definitive guide on the Singapore Ship Sale Form, one that provides readers with a detailed clause-by-clause commentary of the SSF, the case law from which it has drawn inspiration and highlights the key differences between the Singapore Ship Sale Form and other alternative forms. The publication also features useful tips, providing readers with the essential reference tool for the negotiation, closing and enforcement of any ship sale, including the details of Singapore arbitration proceedings.

It is in much hope that the launch of the Sale of Ships Under The Singapore Form will benefit the maritime community, allowing practitioners to better understand the SSF. As part of the launch, renowned maritime legal experts and authors of Sale of Ships Under The Singapore Form, Charles Debattista and Filippo Lorenzon would share salient points about the publication with the industry practitioners comprising shipowners, arbitrators, shipping lawyers, ship brokers and charterers amongst others. About 100 – 150 industry players are expected to attend the launch event and the presentation thereafter.

Venue : Singapore Island Country Club
Organiser: Singapore Association of Ship Suppliers

The Singapore Association of Ship Suppliers (SASS) has entered its 33rd year and will mark this important milestone with a Gala Evening at the Singapore Island Country Club on Tuesday 9th April 2013.

SASS was established by ship suppliers to promote their economic interests and to assist with the development of their activities both nationally and internationally. Today SASS has over 40 Ordinary Members. These are the general ship supply companies, who attend and supply the products and services required by the many ships and oil-rigs that visit the Port of Singapore and its anchorages every year. Singapore is the world's leading supply port. Over the years, thanks to the endeavours of its ship suppliers, Singapore has developed a superb reputation in the international market for reliable quality, good service and excellent availability of a very broadly based range of marine stores, supplies and spares. A modern ship represents a major investment for its owners, and it is essential that it operates at optimum efficiency. Effective and accurate resupply is essential - this is the task of the SASS members. Efficient ship supply is a key component of the Port of Singapore's shore support services.

In addition to the general ship suppliers, SASS has Associate Members. The Associates do not supply direct to ships, but fulfill the important function as vendors of specialist products and services required by the ship supply industry. The SASS Associate members are not only suppliers to the industry in Singapore, but also have a regional function – they are an important supply source for ship chandlers across the Asian region.

SASS is Singapore's national representative of the International Shipsupply & Services Association (ISSA) with its headoffice in London. ISSA, which was formed in 1955, represents over 2,100 ship suppliers in almost 100 countries. Further information is available on the ISSA website: www.shipsupply.org

The Gala Evening will start at 6.30pm with a Networking Reception when a number of the vendors to the ship-supply industry – including SASS's Associate members - will showcase their products and services. The Gala Dinner (8pm) will be attended by SASS's members and their guests, and also representatives from a number of regional and overseas ship supply associations. The International Ship Supply Association President – Mr Jens Olsen – will be in attendance. The Senior Guest-of-Honour will be Captain M. Segar, Deputy CEO at MPA.

In summary, the Singapore Association of Ship Suppliers is a vibrant and active Singapore trade association that is marking its 33rd Birthday with a Gala Evening at the Singapore Island Country Club on Tuesday 9th April 2013 from 6.30pm.
